THE PARTY OF THE P

TO FIRMS INTERESTED IN OVERSEAS TRADE

We introduce ourselves as a firm with three great assets: Experience, integrity and a new policy.

We believe that the best method for an overseas company to conduct their United_King. does business is to do so in their own name through their own Landon offices duly registered for trading purposes.

We acknowledge the advantages offered by both merchants and agents but we maintain that mose advantages are available to an equal extent, plus other advantages. With bill new policy. We also maintain that for companies whose United Kingdom turniver is between £10,000 to 250,000 per annum the inflated expenses of a London Office and staff connet prove economical except when organised on the basis of our new noticy. This policy is to combine the interests of eight overseas firms (for obvious reasons only one firm from one terrifory) and by this method the overseas principal obtains the personal attention of experienced exesptives together with first class London offices and a competent staff by paying only a small part of the overhead expenses. Norton Giles & Company Limited undertake the whole job from utart to finish; company registration, printing, staff employment and all other detaits without any worry or frouble to the oversens Head Offices and furthermore we believe that your London Office can pay for itself by commis-

Registration Application

An application by The Indo-China Steam. Navigation Co.. Ltd., for an extension of time within which to register two mortgages of the s.s. "Tak Sang" and s.s. "Lok Sang" was granted yesterday by Mr. Justice E. H. Williams (Chief Justice), who directed that the necessary registration' be effected within two weeks.

Mr. Charles Loseby, Instructed by Mr. E. S. C. Brooks of Messrs. Hastings & Co., appeared for The Indo-China Steam Navigation Company Limited.

Mr. Loseby said that on Jan. 29, 1948, the Company executed two mortgages in favour of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank (Trustee) Ltd., as security for the payment of pensions to the Company's deck and engineer officers. Under Section 79 of the Companies Ordinance, mortgages are required to be registered -with_the_Registrar_of_Companies_ within five weeks of the ereation. The Company was registered in England and therefore mortgages created by the Company were required to be registered both in England and in Hong Kong. The mortgages were ageordingly sent with all expedition to England for registration. but for some reason or other they were retained by the Registrar of Companies in London until Mar. 31. The mortgages arrived back in Hong Kong on Apr. 12; by which date they were out of time. They were handed to M. Prooks on Apr. 14. In the countainees, Mr. Loseby asked that the time for registration of the mortgages in Hong Rong to be extended.

Granting the application, Mr Justice Williams said that he was satisfied that this was a case where the time for registration, | could be extended, He then directed that the necessary registration be effected within two weeks from yesterday.

now at boiling point. The main battleground is the Western Zone of Germany. Here the struggle is being fought out, to decide who shall own the soul of Germany, the forces of Western true Democracy or Totalitarlanism. The fight is censeless, secret, and ruthless. Only now and again some incident such as the Vienna affair—some indischetion, some job bungled-flures into the limelight to indicate what is going on.

The struggle is largely political for much as the Russians hate to believe it, we have nothing in the | ter. British Zone to hide-no secretly armed German army, no huge factories clandestinely manufacturing arms, ammunition, and recret weapons; no' economic statistics which the Russians could not acquire by simply asking for them, if they chose to adopt such-for them-ingenuous methods.

The Objective

The objective of the Russians is simple. They hope to increase the influence of the German Communist Party by riots, food disorders, and civil chaos leading to starvation of an already hungry people; and, by propaganda and appeals to German national desires, create a picture of a unifled Germany under benevolent Soviet protection. To the latter end they are striving to create a powerful Socialist Unity Party. fusing eventually the Communist Party and such recruits as they can seduce from the Social Democratic Party. This party would then demand union with the Eastern Zone. The Eastern Zone, largely plundered of factories, is already integrated into the Sovlet economy. It is for the mastery of the Western Zone, and in particular the highly industrialised British Zone, that 'one of the most bitter grapples in the history of Secret Services is now going on. For without British ally. Intelligence—the "Eyes and Ears" of the Occupation"-the Control Commission, reluctant as they are to admit it, is powerless to frame policy, powerless to counteract Soviet intrigue.

The Russian Intelligence Service is good. Make no mistake dog. about that. Centuries of underground struggle against the Czarist regime have bred into their bones a natural aptitude for the work. Whether they called themselves the Ochrana, Cheka, the Ogpu, the NKVD, or finally, as now, the MVD, they have been, with the possible exception of the British, the best Secret Service in the world.

Further, the Soviet Government takes its Intelligence Service very seriously indeed. supplies it with ample recruits. ample funds, ample facilities, and almost unlimited power. Further, and equally important, gives it complete moral support It would be comforting to be -able to-say that to face such formidable opponent the British Government, and in particular the Control Commission, is giving wholehearted and unstinted support to our own Intelligence Division in Germany. Such is far from being the case.

no other inducements. -They are too few in numbers: they are clerically understaffed; they are grossly underpaid in the lower grades—I know of one brilliant young officer who, with his wife and child, is trying to live on £20 a month, which is all that he is allowed to draw locally. They live very often in depressing surroundings, on monotonous rations.

Many Hong Kong-ites will remember Mr. Shuftain's connection with the sepsational plan to massacre the entire European community of the Colony on December 13, 1941. Zero hour was to have been on December 13, but information was received at 7 p.m. on December 11 that leaders of the underworld were gathering together. A meeting was held between them and police officials, headed by Mr. Shuftain, at the Cecil Hotel. By 5 a.m. the following morning they had come to terms with the underworld.

Mr. Shaftain was interned in Stanley, but shortly before the arrival of the British Forces in 1945 he managed to get out and set up an office under the nose of the Japanese with the object | of locating the whereabouts of large quantitles of arms which he knew to be in the hands of gangs in the Colony, During his Investigation, Mr. Shaftain discovered that between 50 and 60 million Yen was deposited in the Hong Kong Blink in packages of million each. When the Navy came in, his men seized it. "I used 20 million yen in buying up arms, revolvers and even and anti-tank gun , from the leaders" sald's Mr. Shaftain "in order that their underground organisations would be prevented from perpetrating wholesale looting and slaughter during the interim period following the liberation and the establishment of Jaw and order. One of the men I had difficulty with," he added, "was a Chinese in charge of an organisation of 500 men who had flourished under the Japanese occupation and had been allowed to run gambling houses.

"When I came out of Stanley I met_him_and_he_offered his services to maintain law and order under the British. We had discovered his organisation had a large quantity of arms, so I accepted his services, but pointed out that as we could not allow indiscriminate people to go around the Colony carrying arms without permission, we would have to have names, addresses and photographs of all members of the gang in order to recognise them. The leader, in due course handed this list over. Then when the Navy arrived he was given 5 million Yen in return for all the organisation's arms. I then strongly advised him to get out of the Colony. He did, but returned and was arrested on the application of the Chinese authorities and deported. However, hel -was--contacted -- by . Japanese 24. nours later and executed."

"Prior also to the arrival of the Naval authorities, there was another organisation of 2,000 men under the direction of a Mr. Shun. They also offered their services to the British Government through me, and were in possession of a large quantity of arms. As I had been told the British Navy was landing only world elements surrounding him, 25 men, I was afraid there would which are truly amazing." Egyptian Forces On Palestine Border

Contrary To The U.N. Charter

Lake Success, May 7. Jewish Agency spokesman complained to the -Security-Council-today-of-the-despatch-of-Egyptian forces to the Palestine frontier.

Major Aubrey Eban, who said a report that units of the Egyptian Army had crossed the southern frontiers of Palestine had not been confirmed, asked the Council to "take note" of a statement by the Egyptian Minister of Communications that troops had been sent to the frontier. Remarkable Record

Mr. Stassen is a young man of great practical ability, with a remarkable record, possessing refreshing confidence in the boundloss capacity and resilience of America's Liberal capitalism. He has ideas and convictions on a wide range of subjects. Furthermore, he is prepared to express them at the drop of a hat, an unheard-of thing in past Presiden-, tint_politics.

He is a more mature and tougher Presidential condidate than Willkin in 1940. Yet in the State delegations now preparing for Philadelphia there are plenty of men who, while not immune to the astonishing impact of Stassen's appeal and personabliity, cannot forget that they "rode the white horse" for Willkie in 1940 only to come a cropper.

The Republicans may not maintain their present over-conhdence, today so hostile to Stassen's ambitions. Young, brilliant Daniel was present at the Bikini atoll experiments. What he saw there he can partly reveal. The secrets that for the security of demorracy have been withheld by the United States Government, in close collaboration with the Admiralty and the British Government, are known to him. but he could not reveal them all even to his audience of the nation's léading naval architects and owners.

But this quiet young man, shortish, with curling black hair, blue eyes and a disarmingly engaging manner, brought the experts up with a jolt. He was the sensation of the Spring meeting of the Institution of Naval Architects.

He began with the platitude that "the advent of nuclear power must have a profound effect on the future of our Fleets,' but within a minute or two he had the experts fldgeting in their, seats, waiting for every

THE PROMS

Richard Wagner-whose "Siegfried Idyll" is to be heard in tonight's Proms. -was an "enfant terrible" in his day. Even today his music, particularly in the matter of heavy orchestration and tone colour, sounds more of the 29th than the 19th century. Wagner was directly in the great line of composers following on Beethoven, Liszt, Berlloz, most of whose works came to be acrepted as recognised masterpieces during their lifetime. Wagner was was probably not appreciated as he should have been whilst he was alive, and the old cliche of a "prophet being without honour in his own country" partly applied to him, I think, "Carmen" of course suffered the same ignominy and it was some years before Bizet received the acclamation that was justly his due.

Wagner's operas fall into two main classes or three, if one regards the "Ring" as a separate phase entirely. He came at first under the Italian influence, during which time the mighty "Rienzi" was composed. This opera is replete with "Italianate" flowing melodies, and the orchestration was lighter and less sonorous than in the "Flying Dutchman" or "Tannhauser".

Wagner is far from being "everyone's cup of tea" and three or four hours of listening to "Gotterdammerung" may be rather heavy going for some. "Rienzi" however, is more in the Verdi tradition of opera, with the accent on melody. "Melody" is a muchmaligned word, but using it in its correct context, it describes exactly the period in Wagner's life-time during which "Rienzi" was composed.

The second phase of Wagner's output gave "Lohengrin" "Taunhauser" and "The Flying Dutchman." It must not be inferred that these works are devoid of melody. Very much the reverse is, indeed, the case. One only has to recall Senta's Ballad from "The Flying Dutchman," Elizabeth's Prayer from "Tannhauser" and the dramatic "Narration" from "Lohengrin".

As regards "Senta's Ballad," there is a very fine recording of this in the H.M.V. list by Elizabeth Rethberg. which, in my opinion, has not yet been equalled. Kirsten Flagstead, the Norwegian soprano, is, I believe, the finest interpreter of the role of Senta today. Unhappily, her appearances in England are few and her recordings are not very numerous. On her, however, has fallen the mantle of Rethberg and Lotte Lehmann and she is indeed worthy to carry on the tradition engendered by these Prima Donnas.

But I have digressed from my main topic. Wagner was the first of the great composers fully to explore and develop the "leit-motiv". The "leit-motiv" is the guiding theme always associated with particular characters or ideas. The "Siegfried Idyll" is such a theme.

RACHMANINOFF.

For No. 2. Item, on the Sunday Prom. we are Promised Rachmaninoff's No. 2 Symphony. Sergei Rachmaninoff is unhappily famous for his prelude in C Sharp Minor, which is played by every infant prodigy so soon as his or her stubby fingers, can depress the piano keys (and the listener). The No. 2 is probably the most popular of all Rachmaninoff's works. Rathmaninoff has, I believe, made a very fine recording of this for H.M.V. I write this, however, without reference so my memory may mis-serve me in this particular instance.

It is a pity that Rachmaninoff's orchestral works seem to have taken such complete-precedence over his music for the voice, for he has written some lovely songs. "To the Children" "The Rose Enslaves the Nightingale" are but two that spring to my mind, and very lovely they are too! ZBW, please note.

HOLST

The third and last item of the Prom is to be Gustav Holst's "Jupiter" from his suite "The Planets." Holst's death in 1934 left England the poorer in realms of music. Like Elgar & Vaughan Williams, he did much to make the rest of the world respect his capabilities and confound those whose belief it was that English music could not compare with the mighty composers of the nineteenth century.

Holst was a native of the Middands, and although "The Planets" by which suite he is best known—is not so essentially "of England-England indeed" nevertheless there is a quality about parts of it redolent of the English country-side beloved so well. Vaughan

Contributed By "MUSETTA"

Williams lives today to carry on the torch lighted by Holst, Elgar, & Delius, and he-even more than his illustrious predecessors, steeps his works in the folk-lore traditions with which England is so richly endowed.

In all, this "Prom" looks to be most promising and "nore power to the elbows" of those responsible. There is little enough opportunity of hearing much music in the Colony, so it is to be hoped these Proms will continue on Surday nights for many weeks to come.

ENTERPRISE INDEED

I saw a reference in the Press recently to an enterprising venture which the Singapore Municipal Council is undertaking shortly: Under the Council's nuspices a series of films of operas are being produced. The first, I believe, is to be "Il Pagliacci", with Gigli in the role of Canio. The films, I understand, are sung in Italian (as they should be) with English subtitles, and others are promised if the first venture is a success.

.It seems that Singapore has "stolen a march" on the Colony in this respect. Would not such an experiment as this be worth a trial in Hong Kong? Lingual difficulties is no answer, since the appeal of music finely sung is universal. I do commend this to the notice of the cinemas and hope that one at least will risk the test of the attractions of Gigli against Grable!

FILM MUSIC

A point which often concerns the cinema-goer—especially one who shows an interest in the musical aspect—is the annoying little worry of hearing some well-known music whose title eludes him for the moment. This way sound a little inconsistent, since if a piece of music is well-known, then by the laws of logic its title should be equally familiar. Normally of course that is so, but unhappily the fallibility of mortals is such as to upset the laws of logic or or rather their "modus operandi". The title and the composer eludes him.

Since so such space is given to the preamble of a film in the "credit" section, it seems that it is not too much to ask for the music to be identified, especially where it is used as a theme. or where the music is the main point of local interest. In the "Seventh Veil" (surely one of the most intelligent films ! seem for a long while) Eileen Joyce plays the piano for and on behalf of Ann Todd, who appears as a Concert Planist. The famouse Greig Concerto in A Minor is featured as is Rachmaninoff's No. 2, but I cannot recall any mention of this in the "credits" of the film.

With the Cinema exercising such an influence as it does today (and is it always for good?) - here surely is an opportunity for musical education and appreciation "par excellence". One can take this aspect a stage further. If one were to say to that elusive individual "The Man in the Street", "Would you care to listen to some of Schubert's Chambers Music?, the answer would probably be "No thanks! I don't care for it". But if you asked him to listen to "Lilac Time", a very different reaction is to be expected. One of the most attractive tunes (and tune is the right word) is the Second Schubert's "Trout" Quintet, which is probably one of the most beautiful pieces of Chamber Music ever written.

This aspect is one which film Companies should regard seriously. Enough publicity is given to the men who write the jingling dance tunes, but Debussy is not worth mentioning when his "Clair de Lune" is used as the thome in "Frenchman's Creek?" Those who wield influence have a duty to see that influence is rightly exercised, here surely is a neglected sphere which can with a minimum of troublebe made a "power for good"

A NEW PROGRAMME

"As these notes are written, Z.B.W. draws my attention to a new programme, which is commencing on Tuesday next at 10.15 p.m. From that time until the close-down at 11.00 p.m., there is a new series commencing of Summer Orchestral Concerts which will continue for some weeks.

My Baby Was Born Under Hypnosis By Mrs. Alvira Dickson

-I gave birth to my baby boy while under hypnosis. It was the most amazing and wonderful experience in my whole life. I felt absolutely no pain at any time and have no recollection of the actual delivery, though my doctor tells me I cooperated beautifully. No drugs or anesthetics were used. It was a safe and natural childbirth, without the usual agony and fear.

Hypnosis really works wonders in the delivery room and it certainly deserves more prestige than being referred to as hocus-pocus.

grant you I was sceptical about this method at first. I doubt if I would have agreed to try it unless I had absolute faith in my doctor. I suppose the deciding argument was that I could alway rely on a spinal injection if I felt I didn't want to go through with hypnosis.

One thing most people ask me is "Does the doctor look you straight in the eye, mumble some jumbo and wave his hands at you?"

Such goings-on are mere theatrics for the benefit of theatre audiences.

In the advance training to increase my response to hypnotic suggestion. my doctor stood behind me. He might put his hand on my shoulder and tell me to think of sleep. We had agreed on a key number, in this case 7020, which was the doctor's phone number. However, anything can be used and some doctors merely snap their fingers. At mention of that key number I would go into a deep sleep.

This is where trust in your doctor comes in. It helps to be assured that he cannot make you reveal secrets or do anything that would go against your moral and religious beliefs.

While I was asleep, the doctor told me afterwards, he would reassure me, suggest to my unconscious mind that I would have no pain, had nothing to fear, that the whole experience would not be disagreeable. Upon awakening I'd feel very happy and refreshed. I'd feel like laughing!

I'm sure under ordinary circumstances I would have been a mass of jitters. To have my first child when I was already 27 years old worried me. I'm not husky. I've never weighed more than 109 pounds, so I wouldn't have had too much reserve energy to fall back on. But under the doctor's care, these fears were quieted.

No pain or discomfort accompanied the Big Day.

Turkey Dinner

dmitted to the hospital about noon on Christmas Day. After checking in with the doctor I felt so well I decided to have a turkey dinner. I had double portions of everything and sat listening to the radio. That was around 2:30 that afternoon and my rythmic reactions were coming every three minutes, but they were not severe and I felt fine,

I saw some of the other mothers-tobe and realized how much they were suffering. I felt an overwhelming pity for them. I went up to one woman and asked if there wasn't something -anything-I could do to help her. She just smiled ruefully and said, "Wait till you get to this point." | Of course, I never did.

At four o'clock the nurses asked me if I wanted to see my husband. He was in a terrible state, nervous and jittery, while I was completely calm. It occurred to us later that suggestive therapy might be good for fathers-tobe, too.

We sat and talked a while, and then I began to feel I wanted to do something. I didn't know exactly what I wanted to do, but I no longer wanted to sit! I wanted to help, but I didn't know what or whom. Finally I got up and told my husband, "You know, I think I'm going to leave you now to have our baby."

I walked into the delivery room. It was about 5:30 then. The doctor agreed it was about to happen. I got up on the delivery table and he put me into a hypnotic sleep. When I woke up I asked the doctor when the baby was due.

That Was Are

"He's already arrived," answered the doctor. That was all there was to it. Bruce was born at 6:28 P.M. Christmas Day, a healthy 7 pound 12 ounce baby, 20 inches long.

Well, there The after-effects? weren't any. The whole experience left me rested. I felt more as though I'd been on a vacation than just become a mother. As a matter of fact I wanted to get right up from the delivery table. I actually was allowed to get out of bed the next morning.

There was no need for any postnatal surgery. That had been circumvented by my suggestive therapy sessions with the doctor. As he explained to me, the hypnotic treatment had removed all fear so that I could be relaxed.

Ordinarily muscles tense with fear. But I was not fighting. Therefore, my

PEPTIC ULCER INCURABLE

By JOHN F. ALLEN

Since recurrences appear in more than 90 per cent of cases, peptic ulcer now should be considered an incurable disease, Dr. Theodore L. Althausen, University of California professor, reports.

He described this new outlook on an old and growing disease before the second general session of the American College of Physicians.

Doctor Althausen admitted that present methods of ulcer treatment bring "excellent immediate results" and heal the lesion in all but a relatively small, percentage of cases."

However, he added, the chief unsolved problem is the prevention of recurrence.

Ulcers Recur-

He quoted figures showing that between 10 and 35 per cent of patients have a recurrence during the ifirst six months after a medical "cure," while up to 93 per cent have one or more recurrences within a five year period.

For the recurrences Doctor Althausen blamed five major "inciting causes:" Physical or mental fatigue; emotional disturbances; dietary indiscretions; infections, particularly of the upper respiratory tract; and inadequate original medical treatment.

In one particular group—those persons who have a low sensitivity to pain-prevention of ulcer recurrence is particularly difficult, the doctor said. The ulcer, he explained, may reach an advanced stage before any warning signs are apparent.

Prevention—

He listed a number of preventive steps for doctors and for those who once have suffered from ulcer and face a return to pain and constant distress: 1—The physician should tell his patient that the cause of ulcer is virtually unknown, that a lack of distress is no indication of a permanent cure, and that frequent re-examinations are essential.

2—Patients who have occupational: problems should relax, and perhaps even change to another career in extreme cases.

3-Emotional problems should be ironed out as far as possible between the patient and his doctor and maybe even a psychiatrist.

4—Moderation in eating—particularly of meat—is absolutely essential. 5—Stimulants like coffee, alcohol and tobacco should be left strictly alone. 6-All available precautions should be exercised against the catching of colds, flu or other nose and throat diseases.

Our Serial Story MURDER IN THE BLUE ROOM

THE STORY THUS FAR: A feud for the affections of Jerry Cortion, night club proprietor, has just reached a fatal chmax with the mysterious shooting of Ellen Cray as she, was about to enter the Sun Club's blue rdom where rival Mary Reynolds was Jerry's guest. Ellen was shot twice as the radio blared and the lights were cut. An undischarged small revolver lay near her outstretched right hand. Don Free, agency detective, and his partner Harry Sayne, were on the premises to protect Mary Reynolds. Another dick, Haig McHaig, is also active as questioning starts on the scene of the crime, GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER V

Jerry Gortion lit a cigarette, his fingers steady. "None of us knew Ellen had a gun. And it was dark in here."

McHaig observed: "It was pretty smart shootin, if you ask me. And And what gets me is why—" He broke off. The broad-shouldered Sam who had been with Ellen Cray when she had slugged Free spoke thoughtfully: "She had had it in for this one." He jerked his head towards Mary Reynolds. "And this one—" he gestured towards Free— "made her sore when he tipped her that he was wise to it. She had a few drinks, got the gun. I came along, trying to stop her."

"But she was too strong for you," Free said with sarcasm. "And if someone hadn't been a swell shot in the dark—Miss Reynolds would have been on the floor."

The broad-shouldered one frowned at Free. Mary closed her eyes as Gortion snapped, "Ellen must have been crazy. She was trying for Miss Reynolds, but she was murdered—"

He broke off, looked at Free. His cyes went away from Don's and to Mary's. "You called Free in?" he asked. "You didn't say anything to me about it."

Was Afraid

"I called him in," she said. "I was afraid."

Free observed: "Well, it's all right now. You've got Gortion now, the other one's out of it."

Gortion's right hand clenched as he rasped. "I don't like the way you say that. I had to make a choice and I made it! But someone murdered Ellen. I want to know who did it."

Pree looked at Mary, declaring:
"My job was to see that you didn't get hurt. Ellen Cray was trying to hurt you. She failed I suppose that lets me out now. Let the police take over."

McHaig remarked, "My back was to the gun fiash. The radio was making a terrific racket. Free was behind me somewhere."

"Free will stay in here;" Gortion growled "Menzies!

A short, dapper man stood at the end of the corridor. His face was pale blue his lips twitted.

"Call Lieutenant Risdon and tell him to hurry over here with a couple of the boys. Quie; like, Keep the others out of here, and don't let anyone in or out of the Club until he gets here. We'll—" his eyes went around the blue room—"stay right in here until Ben arrives."

RANUL WHITFIELD

Menzies said: "Okey." He went out along the corridor.

Gortion offered? "I don't carry a gun. You can't shoot a person if you haven't got one."

Free said softly: "I carry a- gun. Its fully loaded."

The Light Switch

Gortion then said very slowly, "I want to know about the light switch."

But that inquiry was postponed for the time when Sayne volunteered: "I tried to stop Miss Cray in the corridor. I didn't see the gun, but I'd heard this fellow talking, trying to stop her." He gestured towards the big, broadshouldered Sam.

Free looked at the man. "What's your full name?" he asked. "She called you Sam before she slammed me down."

The big man looked towards the modernistic copper walls that were reflecting blue light. He said huskily:

"My name's Sam Blue."
Gortion whispered grimly, "Blue murder."

The big man's eyes were half closed, fixed on Gortion. "I tried to stop her," he breathed.

Gortion said: "Sure," in a low tone.

"You didn't stop her, but someone else did," Don snapped. Miss Cray was coming for Miss Reynolds, and she was stopped."

The dance orchestra started playing again as Gortion spoke just above a whisper: "Maybe."

Lieut. Ben Risdon was a short, redhaired man with a close-clipped mustache. He had blue eyes and big hands, his wrists were thick. Two uniformed officers were inside the blue room.

Risdon said in a cheerful voice: "I get it like this. Miss Cray was strong for you, Jerry. You liked her, but not enough to quit liking Miss Reynolds. The latter was threatened. You knew the Cray girl hated her but you didn't think she'd try to kill. You thought the threats were bluff. But you got McHaig to stick around, anyway. And Miss Reynolds got Don Free to stick around. Free looked the Cray girl up, told her she'd been mixed up in a few things and warned her. He got a slam on the head. And Sam Blue, here—"

The police lieutenant, looked nar rowly at him.

That's It

thetic because the Cray girl was losing her man. You came up here with her, but you tried to stop her from using the gun. That it?"

Blue said thickly: "That's it."
Risdon nodded. "Sayne here was working with you, Free. Miss Cray got past him in the corridor there. The lights went out and the radio back of the bar opened up full blast. There were two shots. The room was black, yet none of you seem to be able to locate the flashes. The sound of the gun was only partially drowned by the radio racket.

"Miss Cray apparently had her back to the corridor, which means she was shot from the room. Sayne and Blue were in the corridor, behind the girl as she came in. They didn't see gun dashes. Gortion, Miss Reynolds, Free. McHaig and the bartender—you were in the room. The Cray girl was beween you five and the other two, when she went down. No exit from the room but by the corridor. No windows. Nothing but the walls. Right?"

Gortion admitted, "It looks that way."

Free said: "One thing, Risdon.
The girl might have reached the room, turned, facing the corridor. She might have known the light switch was out there. She might have been shot from the corridor."

The Bartender

The bartender cleared his throat. "I got to tell you," he said. "I got a switch on the lights, back of the bar, When I heard what was being said, knew that Miss Cray was coming in, I reached for the switch. Mr. Gortion had told me that McHaig was coming, and he'd hinted why. It's got around some, anyway. My hand hit the radio switch, opened it up. It heats up quick and it was set wrong. My hand went on up and I got the lights out. Then the radio racketed. And I ducked back of the bar."

Free asked, "Why didn't you say that before?"
"I figured this would be a better

"The switch in the corridor was thrown over," Free observed. "Someone called that it had been, anyway."

Blue spoke huskily. "I did that, I was trying to get the lights on.

When they didn't come on I thought something was wrong. I left the switch where I pulled it."

"How'd you know where the switch was—to find it in the dark?" Free asked.

"I worked here for a few months, just seeing that things went easy-like."

Lieut Risdon looked at Gortion who said: "I guess he did. Menzies handles such details."

Free scrutinized Blue. "If you knew that switch—you'd have known it was on when your fingers touched it. Even if the lights were out. You'd have known you were throwing it off not on."

"I didn't think of that," grunted Blue. "And it might have been changed."

She Passed Me

Sayne said: "Blue was behind the girl. She passed me, and he was behind me. The shots sounded as though they came from the room. I thought they were from Miss Cray's gun."

Risdon looked at the bartender, ask-

"Dick Evans. As I said, I figured someone was coming in with a gun, and I wanted to get the room dark. The radio racket was an accident."

"Try it now," Risdon ordered. "Hit the radio switch, then the light

Evans raised a hand and hit the radio switch. His fingers went on up and the lights went out. The radio came in with a roar. Music blurred and boomed into one screaming note and Lieut. Risdon shouted: "Cut it!"

The radio was silent as Risdon said:
"Leave the lights off." Then he spoke thoughtfully. "The switch controls the corridor lights, too, and that makes it black. All right, switch 'em on."
As that was done, Risdon said:

As that was done, Risdon Said: "I've looked at the guns, McHaig's and Free's and Sayne's are loaded all the way. So is the Cray girl's, Gortion and Evans and Blue didn't have a gun. Loaded guns and no guns—"

He broke off as one of the two uniformed officers reported: "We've been over the room twice, Lieutenant. Not a weapon around. And there are no powder burns on the victim's clothes. She got it from a distance a short distance, anyway."

Risdon looked intently at Mary Reynolds. "You haven't been searched," he said. "Did you kill her?"

THE WAY OF A TOMBOY

PART I

How do you think she'll like Cliff-dale after living so long on Long Neck Headland?" asked Margaret Wilkins.

With her sisters, June and May, she was waiting impatiently inside the big gates of Cliffdale School for the new girl, whom they had met while on an exciting seaside holiday.

June said nothing, but she rolled her eyes expressively.

—that's what's worrying me."

"She won't have much chance of being a tomboy here," grinned hiargaret She looked impatiently through the bars of the gates. "Do you remember how she used to climb all over the headland? And what a time she gave us going through that underground passage to the old fort! I'll never forget it!"

"She'll miss tearing round the harbour in her boat," mused May. "Just what is there for anyone to do here? I ask you! I was only thinking the other day that if Clindale were perched on the top of Long Neck Headland, and if we had a special wharf and each of us had a boat—"

"Stop!" pleaded June. "Such an idea makes me—oh, there's a car—and it's Billy!"

The triplets opened the gate and rushed out to greet a tall girl who came rushing towards them with a suitcase in one hand, and her hair flying in the breeze.

"I suppose I'm expected!" she cried in a loud voice. "Mummy was coming with me, but I said I wasn't going to a kindergarten. Besides everything was fixed with this joint weeks ago. Had a bit of a job getting a taxi from the station."

The triplets stared. Until now they felt they had been the most outrageous pupils Cliffdale had ever seen. But Billy Rawson made them breathless. She seemed like a whirlwind that was going to disturb every cranny in the old school.

"The Girls of Cliffdale" is the story of a tomboy, Billy Lawson, at a girls' school.

"Why did you come in slacks?" asked Margaret. She hardly knew her own voice. It sounded so prim. "I "Soon change em," chuckled the lanky tomboy from Long Neck Headland. "As a matter of fact, I was running late for the train and didn't have time to change. Show me the way round, will you? I've been looking forward to seeing you until my heart ached. It's been lonely at Long Neck since you were down. Did I miss you!" She hugged the triplets in turn with her free arm and tossed back her head. "Now to prison! Lead me on to the ogre's office."

In a daze, the triplets walked up the drive with the new girl. They knew that they would, from now on have to take a back seat at Cliffdale. Here was a new ring-leader of funand probably trouble—if ever there was one!

Billy Lawson answered to "Isabel" from the mistress, who insisted that she forget she had ever been nicknamed Billy; but Billy she was called by the girls.

It seemed to take her but a few minutes to learn all there was to be learned about Cliffdale, and after the third day she said she felt as if the "old barn" was as good as her home on Long Neck Headland. Then, as the days went on, she told the triplets that she feared she was becoming an "utter worm."

"A worm?" asked June, mystified. Billy's conduct had conformed to all the rules, but she was still the independent tomboy.

"I mean a bookworm," Billy corrected herself. "Do you know what I think we should do to liven this place up?"

"What?" breathed the triplets, all in one eager outburst.

THE DRAGON-KILLER

One day I read a book about A man who hustled in and out Killing dragons off in droves And putting them in kitchen stoves.

That night I dreamed as awake I lay.
That I a dragon had killed that day.
With my trusty sword held at my side
I plunged it through his scaley hide

A dragon is a hefty beast.
Weighting twenty tons, at least.
I hitched him to my trusty horse
And dragged him to the door by force.

Our kitchen stove was run on gas, And the oven far too small, alas! I could not bake him there, I knew. And I could not think just what to do.

What to do was not quite certain. So I wrapped him in a kitchen curtain.

And in my dream I cursed the man-Who'd started off this silly plan.

The dragon was happy and so was I Before I'd said, "To Do or Die"; "It's too late now," my conscience said, "You've banged the dragon on the head."

Of course I said when I awoke, "The whole thing's just silly joke, A kitchen stove is far too small To cook a dragon there at all."

Talking about Films.

SMALL GLASS: BIG MARTINI

By Fred Majdalany

I am not, on the whole, wild about singers. Nature's law of compensation seems particularly harsh on them.

Those who are gifted with fine voices are seldom gifted with much else. Unless you count an apparently huge appetite and a certain touchiness in private life.

The sight of a fleshy Tristan loving and dying at the top of his voice is, to me, one of the least satisfactory aesthetic experiences.

Once I saw the redoubtable Gigli in "La Boheme," and all that lingers of that occasion is the memory of a figure like Puss in Boots comically teiling some girl that her tiny hand was frozen. It may have been frozen, but I well remember that it wasn't tiny.

On the distaff side there have been exceptions like Lily Pons and Grace Moore. But I can't think of any among the male nightingales.

It is with astonishment as / well as pleasure, therefore, that I draw your attention this week to Nino Martini, who can be found in One Night With You, a light-weight English musical comedy.

Mr. Martini—an Italian member of the New York Metropolitan Opera—is unlike any other tenor I have run across in a long tenor-hating career.

He is not a fat man. He is very handsome. He can act. He has a sense of cornedy that is gentle, and as dry as a good Martini should be.

He glides into a song without effort, and sings as though he were enjoying it. And when he lets his superb voice really go he manages this, too, without any of that petrified straining of the face which, in the case of most tenors, gives me the impression that they are about to throw up.

Mr. Martini, in short, is fine. The

It is about an opera star (Nino Martini) being stranded at an Italian way-side station with the daughter of an English diplomat (Patricia Roc), and their adventures with and without song, before they are found by the girl's static English fiance (Guy Middleton), dynamic Italian lover (Ronar Colleano) and comedy father (Hugh

It is obviously the kind of plot that is not to be described in detail in a two-column page. It is enough to say that the basic slowness of the picture is periodically relieved by sips of Martini and gulps of lively comedy.

Besides those I have already mentioned. Charles Goldner, Richard Hearne, Stanley Holloway, and Judith Furse help these interludes along.

"One Night With You" is probably the kind of film people have in mind when they sometimes say to me. 'Can you recommend a show—something light you know—the wife and I don't go often and we don't want anything heavy.

I haven't anything very much to say against The First Gentleman nor have I much to say in its favour. It is that kind of picture.

Solid and competent and straightforward — yet curiously null in its effect.

It is the story of Charlotte, daughter of the Prince Regent—her love affair with Prince Leopold of Saxe-Coburg—the Regent's opposition to their marriage—her death bearing a stillborn son.

Jean-Pierre Aumont and Joan Hopkins are fair but by no means unforgetable lovers. Cecil Parker gives the standard caricature of the Prince Regent (lechery, false tummy and all) with a strong dash of his own niceness which can never be suppressed.

Yet it seems to amount to no more than another film in fancy dress—however reverently you breathe the fetish word "Regency."

However, no one is flogged or raped, and that nowadays is quite an achievement.

AN ARTISTIC TRIUMPH

Britain has put Shakespeare on the screen once again and the result is an artistic triumph, in the opinion of critics.

Sir Laurence Olivier has followed his interpretation of Henry V with a magnificent portrayal of Hamlet. The film, which has been produced at a cost of £500,000, was given its first public showing in the presence of the King and Queen in London on Wednesday.

It is a production of which Britain's film industry may well be proud. The consensus of expert critical judgment is very favourable.

"It has moments of rare beauty and feeling such as the cinema has seldom seen," says one critic. "It has acting which proves once more the greatness of the English stage. It stirs emotions as deeply as only Shakespeare can.

The film may not have the 'plc-torial quality of Henry V but it has, however, the rarer virtue of proving that the greatness of Shakespeare's plays can be translated to the screen without loss of dignity to the author and with immense enjoyment to the public."

Another critic writes "This is a fun to be seen by all When it is over you are sure to find yourself aroung violently about it for hours. Harnlet will be the dinner table topic of the year."

Appealed And Shot Five Times

The British Judge-Advocate-General compiled a complete dossier of the case by the middle of last year, based largely on the evidence submitted by the Cheshire schoolmaster and for this they wrote to thank him.

When the trial is held evidence will show how after one of the murdered men was shot he tried to struggle to his feet appealing for his life as a prisoner of war. The guard told him to stay where he was and shot him five times.

In September a correspondent reported that Alan's hody had been exhumed for investigation of his wounds by a pathologist.

Scraps of information still came in.
In January this year a revised dossier was produced.

The whereabouts of Fritz Wenzel remains to be cleared up, but he probably cannot stay free for long now.

Mr. Robinson's task is nearly complete.

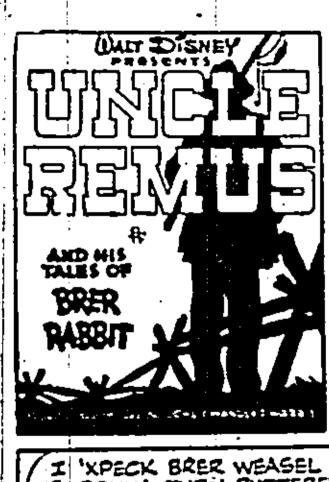

After three years of searching and tireless questioning he wanted but one thing.

He asked that his son's body be refurned to England. The reply from the Imperial War Graves Commission is that there has been a general fuling egainst this. Alan must remain in the cemetery a few miles from the place where he was so brutally murdered.

But Mr. Robinson has been given permission to attend the trial of the three Germans if he wishes.

The Story Of A Relentless English Schoolmaster

ONE MAN HUNTS FOUR KILLERS--BY POST

This is the story of the relentless determination of an English school-master who, single handed, working entirely through the post, has brought to almost complete success a three-year man-hunt for four German alleged murderers.

Today two await trial. One is known to have been shot. The net of the farflung letter post is believed to be closing around the fourth.

One man...and many hundred postage stamps.

In its way it is the most remarkable man-hunt in history.

Yesterday Mr. Tom Robinson, 50year-old schoolmaster, showed me, in the sitting-room of his house in Chestnut-drive, Sale. Cheshire, the vast dossiers which hold the record of his activites.

The story began when a Lancaster bomber in a night raid over Germany was shot down in 1945.

The seven airmen baled out. At least three of them were murdered.

Mr. Robinson set out to find why the seven men did not return. For one of the murdered men was his only son, Alan, a 19-year-old sergeant flight en-

Month after month, without leaving his home, Mr. Robinson reconstructed every moment in the last hours of his son's life, from the time he parachuted in to a field in Buttstaedt until the time he was taken out and shot. He traced five of the other members of

Then, without relent, he trailed the four men he believed responsible for the murders.

when war ended two months later, he determined that, no matter how long it took, he would trace his son.

In May, 1945, he obtained from the Air Ministry the course taken by his son's aircraft. With a detailed map of Germany he marked the main towns along the route.

To the officials of 43 of them, he sent a list of the crew with an appeal for information. All but three letters were return unopened.

Mr. Bevin Would Not Act

He sent more letters. Some found their way into Germany. The same appeal was in them all—"My boy may have crash-landed in your area. Perhaps his name is among your records."

Three months later he wrote to Mr. Bevin at the Foreign Office asking him to approach our ambassador in Czechoslovakia but was told "No useful purpose would be served."

At last from the Air Ministry came tangible news of Alan's death... Your son was shot with another member of the crew while trying to escape at Hermsdorf, south-west of Buttstaedt." They did not know where he was buried.

In January, 1946. Mr. Robinsan was successful in compelling the Air-Ministry to give him the names of the suspected German murderers. Landrat Hoffman, of Weimar: Herman Jacobs Burgemeister of Buttstaedt. Bernhard Kalkofe and Fritz Weitzel. All the men were missing.

The outcome of more letters to Germany was the locating of a German guard at Buttstaedt, who was persuaded to cooperate. Let me cal! him Hans, for there may still be underground Nazis who will not like the help he gave.

Mr. Robinson began a regular correspondence with Hans, who undertook to search the surrounding countryside for information the far-away schoolmaster wanted.

The hunt grew warm by April when Hans wrote that Fritz Wenzel had been located in the American zone of Germany and was being detained.

He sent also photographs of Alan's grave at Buttstaedt cemetery and from these pictures Mr. Robinson was able to trace another members of the crew. He notified the man's relatives. In the following month. Hans had made countless inquiries that built up a picture of Alan's death.

When fighters hit the Lancaster at 4,000ft., it burst into flames and the crew parachuted into a snow-covered Around midnight two men. one of them Alan, arrived at the village and were taken to a hut under guard. Next morning, both were taken to Buttstaedt by order of Landrat Hoffman, subprefect of the district, and shot at a road junction. The incident aroused indignation even among the villagers.

News For Crimes

Commission

Mr. Robinson had by this time written to the local gravedigger and found his son had been buried by a padre and his grave was being looked after.

All this information was sent to the War Crimes Commission. So was the next news which Mr. Robinson received from a German contact in July.

The aircraft's bomb aimer was taken to the police station. Eye-witnesses described him being placed blindfolded in the street where it is alleged. Landrat Hoffman ran his car over him. He was buried in the churchyard at Schlossviopache.

Hans sent a painting of the grave. which was forwarded to his relatives.

More inquiries by Mr. Robinson revealed that another sirman, a warfantofficer, had been taken to a farm, injured but progressing.

A few days later Hoffman ordered an S.S. doctor to give the airman iniections and he died a few hours later on his way to hospital.

On receiving this information the War Crimes Commission asked Mr. Robinson to continue with his in-

For his persistence, despite the distance from which he was working, was achieving results which in this case were of more value than the information of Allied inquirers on the of postage stamps.

Slowly Mr. Robinson built up a string of German contacts. In letter after letter he begged for any scrap of information they could give him, however trivial.

One fact led to another. He traced the places where the wanted Germans had lodged.

One Escaped The Hangman

He found that-Landrat Hoffman had escaped the hangman and had been shot by a German sentry. For proof he obtained a statement of his death from the burgomaster of Weimar.

From the American Crimes Suspectand Witness Enclosure he found that Fritz Wenzel had been handed over to the British authorities. He is now missing.

Soon Kalkofe was in British hands.
Now to find Herman Jacobs. A chain of clues led Mr. Robinson to an internment camp at Kornwestheim. He wrote to the commanding officer asking. "Is there a man called Herman Jacobs in your camp?"

The reply was that he had been transferred to Dachau. Mr. Robinson notified the British authorities, and there Jacobs was located.

By March last year Kalkofe made a statement admitting that both airmen were shot but denied taking an active part in the murder. The safety catch on his rifle, he declared. Was not working.

Meanwhile Hans reported that he had traced two more members of the crew, a flying officer and the young air gunner.

Information began to come through more slowly, for sources were now well inside the Russian zone.

The Judge-Advocate thanking him for his work, advised him of the dangers of Russian censorship.

He was covering delicate ground in their zone. Too many letters might result in them taking an undue interest in this and other cases.

Despite this warning the authorities still asked Mr. Robinson for more information, this time about the 5.5; doctor who made the injections.

He heeded the warning, but conting

- "In spite of nationalisation it is still abnost impossible to get a seat in many long-distance trains."—Sigh from a Socialist.

Have you ever tried wheel-tapping, sir? All you need is an old boiler-suit and a hammer. You then walk along the line to any compartment you may fancy and smartly tap the wheels with the hammer, at the same time exclaimin a shocked voice: "T'ch, t'ch t'ch! Look it here, Joe! Here's another one with a whacking great crack in it! It never used to happen when we was the old Midland!"

Another good plan which can scarceiy fail howa lays is to fling open the door of any compartment at random and say to one of the four passengers occupying corner seats: "Look sharp, now! Take your bag and go over to Platform 7 and report to Group Zoner
Harris. You're drafted into the cotton industry."

Don't forget, though, sir, that in spite of nationalisation the British Public is very apt to sit in anything on railway stations, fondly believing that if only it sits there long enough it will ultimately reach its destination.

Only last week a shrewd fellow at a London terminus turned a number of passengers out of what he thought was a catile truck bound for Crewe by shouting "All change!" He then took sole possession of it and went to sleep. When he woke up, hours later, he found that he was sitting in the third-class waiting-room.

Do your Understand Your Garden?

It is not generally realised by amateurs that if a garden is to produce a luxuriant display of blossoms and regatables in the height of summer than the ground must first be prepared in the spring. Many failures may be attributed to ignorance of this elementary principle.

The best method of preparation, and one much favoured by professional horticulturists, is to turn over the earth with a spade. This breaks up the soil into small pieces, thereby greatly aiding cultivation

When digging, care should be taken to thrust the spade towards the ground with a downward movement, rather than thrust it towards the sky with an upward movement. The spade will then actually nenetrate the soil to a depth of several inches.

If the handle is afterwards pulled towards you and the implement turned over it will be found that a clod has been dug.

A good tip to remember is always to move slowly backwards when digging. If the reverse direction is taken by the digger he will walk over the freshly dug soil and tread it underfoot, thereby completely nullifying his previous work.

Two-suit hands have some helpful features. In the first place the distribution is so strong that an opening bid on them can be made on shaded high-card values (i.e., two "defensive" tricks instead of two and a-half). Then, again, there is the double chance of finding a fit in the trump suit in the partner's hand. Consider the hand below:

HAXX DAJ109 C108XXX S108742 HQJ9XX:

S Q H'10 x x D 7 5 3 2 C K 9 x x x

W E D none C A Q J S K J 9 6 5 3 H K x 7 D K Q 8 6 4

C none The score was game-all. After East (dealer) passed, South opened with One Spade at most tables in a recent competition. He could, on his strong two-suit distribution, shade his requirements in defensive tricks down to two. The further bidding proceeded on different lines up to contracts of Five or Six Diamonds or Four or six Spades. An easy Slam was made in a contract in Diamonds but not in Spades. Where North bid Two Diamonds over One Spade, rightly giving preference to his shorter Diamonds because of the high-card strigth of the suit, the later bidding found a contract in Diamonds. Note now how all three helpful features applied:

1. South's opening bid on shaded high-card values because he had a two-suiter.

2. The "double chance" found a perfect fit in Diamonds; and
3. In the play winners were developed in South's second suit, Spades.

After low spades had been ruffed on the second and third rounds and trumps had been drawn, the last three Spades, K, J, 9, took tricks. The stronger the two-suit hand, the greater is the chance of developing winners in the second suit. The bidding must be kept low on two-suit hands, so that a bid in the second suit is not shut out.

Jerusalem, May 7. The British efforts to get peace in Jerusalem brought agreement from both Arabs and Jews tonight to cease fire in the city as from noon tomorrow.

The agreement was announced in an official British communique from Jericho, where Sir Alan Cunningham, British High Commissioner for Palestine and Sir Henry Gurney, the Chief Secretary, were in conference with Arab leaders, including Azzam Pasham, Secretary-General of the Arab League.

Labour Questions In Orient

Romo, May 7. The Indian allegations that Britain and the United States were "helping to keep Indian and Ceylonese workers oppressed" were today the subject of protests by Mr. Vincent Tewson and Mr. James Carey, the British and American delegates to the World Federation of Trade Unions' Executive meeting here.

Mr. S. A. Wickrema Singh, representing India and Ceyon, blamed the British Government, the American Congress of Industrial Organisations and American capitalism for the "oppression."
